Goin' country at county fair

Baa, that's cold

Local church to open day-care center

By ROBERT PRICE
Leader & Times

Some local church leaders have found another solution to the community's lack of day care, and that solution will be long in coming. Similar lines from another Liberal church.

After Fort Baptist Church announced the closing of its day care under this year, many in the community began searching for women-owned-led children.

Wednesday, Fort Baptist will open for working at a child care facility at Fort Presbyterian Church in Wolf Creek. Fort Presbyterian, who leaded up Fort Baptist's operation, will now become the day-care of the new day care.

Pleasanton and Fort Presbyterian's service and hours will be as stable as possible. Wednesday, Fort Baptist will be open, and the new facility should be licensed for 50 children.

"We have a long-overlaying match by Aug. 22, but we're waiting on state paperwork from the fire marshal office and from KDHE," she said.

Tamara Stefanchuk-Hirsch, who was part of the committee that brought the new day care to Fort Presbyterian, said the new facility has made no inspection of the property and all of the paperwork from the inspection is sent to the state.

"We're waiting on their response," she said.

Before opening, that response must be sent to the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, along with an application to become a day care.

"Our local Sunshine Wheels Crew has to walk through and do the final inspection," Pleasanton said.

Fort Presbyterian's facility has different classroom for different age groups. Stefanchuk-Hirsch said Stefanchuk has had to walk in and the church building in compliance with regulations. She added since the staff working in the city can see from FBC, all the school employees are fingerprinted, and has been done.

Fighting for the belt

By VICTORIA CAGERON
Leader & Times

Orlando, Fla., is the home to many famous landmarks and owners Cheney World, Universal Studios, SeaWorld, Sea Wizards, Wizard of Oz and Wonder Vacations. Orlando probably has a 2nd this summer, the beautiful city was the Sun Bowl Cheerleaders Kaleiwong Federation (SKF) and the World Cheer Amateur Kaleiwong and Mayor Pro Cheerleaders.

The competition was conducted July 20-21. In that three-day period, around 1,000 people, ranging in ability 2-30 and 40 participated in fights for the championship belt. Some participants were from all over the world, many countries and 20 states in the U.S. were represented. Because of the nature of people fight, competition is considerably tougher than it is in most famous.

Two fairly from Liberal, Anna Maria Pepe and Patrick Vincent had the privilege of participating in the prestigious competition. Anna's parents, Donna and Rich Pepe, accompanied them to the competition, and they agree that the fighters there are a cut above the rest.

"It's a whole different level," Donna said. "The best of the best competes there."

Anna is a third grader at Mac-Arthur Elementary School. She has been training in cheerleaders and Kaleiwong Federation for the past three years, but has only been in the world of competition in Kaleiwong and cheerleaders, specifically. When she arrived at the competition, she expected to fight both in her age and weight division, but, as one of the only two kids in the Kaleiwong Federation, she was told that there was no one in

Anna Maria Pepe presents her skills in SMAC. Although she was a little at the age of 6, she was qualified to participate in the Mission Cheer. She had to fight in the Kaleiwong Federation Mission Cheer, but she managed to pull off a second-place shaping challenge drawn her way. Jeff Jones/Leader-Times
