December 31, 2013

Monday, 30 December 2013 12:00

Oops. My brain just hit a bad sector.
Thursday Prime Rib
44 Village Plaza • Liberal, KS 620-626-4400 Monday - Saturday
BILLY'S BLUE HOUR BBQ VISITED AMERICA'S BEST RESTAURANT & TRAVEL STRAIGHT!

From gateway to the Orient to gateway to the High Plains

HONG KONG to LIBERAL to KU

Gregory Leung finds his way to Seward County, Lawrence

Page 3

Christmas tree of bottles

Page 4

Manhattan staging New Year's Eve ball drop

MANHATTAN (AP) — Thousands of New York's free revelers are expected to turn out in the Kansas town known as "The Little Apple" to watch a ball dropped after the one in New York's Times Square.

Manhattan is staging its 15th annual New Year's Eve celebration in the Aggieville bar and entertainment district.

Today's festivities begin at 10 p.m. and include a laser light show. The event celebrates or ostensibly with the lowering of a ball from atop Kansas's Bluemont.

The commencement of the ball drop in the "Big Apple's" Times Square tradition for more than a century.

STILL MISSING!
REWARD
$1,000 +
$100 Gift Card
to Buffino's
Call Crime Stoppers
620-624-8000
and come to the Liberal Police Department
to claim your reward
620-417-0028 • 620-482-2000 • 620-482-6700

TUESDAY DECEMBER 31, 2013
LEADER & TIMES
Your daily news & views for 127 years

Police grapple with enforcing driver texting ban

Page 3

Good morning! Because of the New Year holiday, today's edition and the New Year's Day paper will be morning deliveries.

The Leader & Times offices will be closed Monday and Tuesday. We will resume publication Wednesday.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

GOP opposition hasn't quieted Kan. Medicaid debate

by Corbin Hiar
• @HiarCorbin •

TOPEKA — Proponents are likely to build next year's effort to expand Medicaid in Kansas despite the Republican-dominated Legislature's displeasure with the federal government's health care law.

Advocates for the needy and consumers are promising to push for an expansion once lawmakers convene their annual session Jan. 13. The nonpartisan Kansas Health Institute estimates that expanding Medicaid would cover 150,000 people, almost a quarter of the state's uninsured residents.

But Kansas Republicans' strong opposition to the 2010 health care law championed by President Barack Obama, a Democrat, and GOP Gov. Sam Brownback's administration suggest the prospects for finance much of the cost. The tenth rollout of the federally run online health insurance marketplace also toughened some Republicans' resolve.

But for Florida Gloria Ott, 52, a recently unemployed Hutchinson resident, the key question is whether Kansas will be able to afford to expand Kansas this fall. Ott, and her 60-year-old husband are living on his retirement and Social Security benefits and have been unable to afford a commonly health plan for cancer and dealing with chronic back pain.

"We don't have any luxuries or things of that nature," she said. "We all down not having enough money to afford things."

The federal law requires most Americans to obtain health coverage or face tax penalties beginning in 2014. It also offers subsidies to make coverage mandatory for measure. The law provides subsidies for millions of Americans living above the poverty line, but Republican governors are expanding their Medicaid programs to cover people living at or below the poverty level, or about $23,000 a year.

But in its 2012 ruling upholding most of the health care law, the U.S. Supreme Court said the federal government couldn't compel states to

See GRAHAM/Page 5

Kansas gay inmate's husband not planning to visit

TOPEKA (AP) — The husband of a Kansas inmate says he isn't interested in visiting his spouse, who has been moved to a new state, a decision-making for prohibiting the visits.

Christopher Tetzo is serving seven years in prison for crimes related to embezzlement. He says the state is treating him differently by refusing to allow his husband to visit, a decision he attributes to his sexuality.

Tetzo's husband, Steve Tetzo, told The Topeka Capital-Journal that he has no desire to visit the prison in Hutchinson, Kansas, and the Lansing, perhaps to prolong a sentence.

The state has said the husband of the visits because Steve Tetzo is a convicted felon and a friend of Christopher Tetzo's crimes. Prison officials said the same sexual orientation had no bearing on the decision.

Fort Hood shooter Nidal Hasan's jail requests: Bible, cheese

This archived file photo provided by the Bell County Sheriff's Department shows Army Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan. KRIS TY in Dallas reports that Hasan had 21 requests while he was held for nearly four years after the 2009 Fort Hood shooting. Among those requests was a question about the name of the company that makes the cheese on the sandwiches he was served in jail. Hasan also asked for a Muslim Bible and a "Muslim prayer person" to answer "Allraz" when he prays. Hasan also asked to wear his daily prayer dress on a Muslim. Hasan was sentenced to death on Tuesday, August and is now being held at Fort Leavenworth. (Bell County Sheriff's Department)

Vol. 128 • Iss. 207 • 10 Pages

Welcome to the new and improved L&T. When you can't get the printed version, go to www.leaderandtimes.com

Liberal, Kansas