May 12, 2014

Monday, 12 May 2014 11:47

Why is the day that you do laundry, cook, clean, iron and so on, called a day off?
Come Watch Many Sports Games with Wings, & Spirits Night
44 Village Plaza • Liberal, KS 620-620-6400 Monday - Saturday
BILLY'S BLUE DUCK BBQ VOTED AMERICA'S BEST RESTAURANT & TEXAS STRAIGHT

Little Britches Rodeo rides into town PAGE 4

Yellow Brick Road leads to Light Park PAGE 3

Crowning the Cinco de Mayo Queen PAGE 4

Colorful Cinco de Mayo parade PAGE 5

MONDAY MAY 12, 2014
LEADER & TIMES
Your daily news & views for 128 years

Liberal man dies in early Sunday morning wreck

By JOHN PHILLIPS
Guide & Tour

A Liberal man died Sunday morning when his vehicle went off the road and banded into the railroad embankment, according to a report from the Kansas Highway Patrol.

Lloyd Andrew Jolly, 35, was travelling southwest on U.S. Highway 54 near the Western Avenue intersection around 2:40 a.m. Sunday when he 2014 Ford Mustang Cobra and entered the west ditch and "ventilated into the railroad embankment," according to the report.

He was pronounced dead at the scene and his body was transported to Miller Mortuary.

He was not wearing a seat belt, the report added.

Maine woman, 80, goes skydiving on Mother's Day

WASHFIELD, Maine (AP) — An 80-year-old mother of seven from Waterville has fulfilled a nearly 80-year-old wish to fly on Mother's Day.

Marjorie Bell hopped out of an airplane and with the help of a tandem skydiver floated 10,000 feet to the ground in Mother's Day, one day after her birthday.

Bell tells the Morning Sentinel that she "never felt so far."

The way is completed on the jump by several family members, including a daughter, a brother and two grandchildren.

Bell, a grandmother and great-grandmother, had wanted to jump out of a plane since she was interrupted by diphtheria on a trip to Florida 70 years ago.

Bell already has plans for her 81st birthday. She wants to go to the new Grand Palace in the Maine New Brunswick border.

Family tests Kan. water law, claims impairment

SUBLETTE (AP) — A western Kansas family concerned about the future of the Ogallala aquifer is testing a state water law that allows senior water rights holders to force junior rights holders to reduce pumping to the rate of recharge.

Fifth generation farmer Jay Garrison and his brother Jim Bell filed an impairment claim in 2010 in Finland Ground Water Basin, a 1,000-square-mile tract of Sublette and Stanton Kansas, the community.

The Hutchinson News reports the brothers filed another impairment claim in 2012.

Last week a judge issued a temporary injunction against a plaintiff including him from pumping water from the Finland Ground Water Basin.

Gov. Sam Brownback's administration has said the state's water resources could be nearly exhausted in 50 years if pumping continues at the current pace.

Saints salute class of 2014 graduates

Students of the graduating class of 2014 at Seward County Community Colleges/Area Technical School Kansas to the speeches given during the commencement ceremony. The special speaker for the ceremony was SCCCATS alumna Patricia Rodriguez-Baez, who shared her own experiences from school. (AP Journal Photo)

Kansas considers revised permit for coal plant

By JOHN HANNA
AP Business Writer

TOPEKA — The state's top sentinel on the environment is considering a fourth-time-lucky effort to clear the way again for a new coal-fired power plant in southwest Kansas, but a commonly-used tactic to suppress Gov. Sam Brownback's administration is taking about one to ensure that the Kansas Supreme Court is not the "Southwest Kansas Power Corp." needs a pollution-control permit from the state Department of Health and Environment for its proposed 895-megawatt plant near Holcomb in Finney County, where the Hutchinson-wide sheath has another confined plant. It is the second in a year. In December 2013, the eight-member agency, the Kansas Supreme Court ordered the department to write a 10-year-old regular-air-quality standards.

Secretary Robert Moser is reviewing a proposed amendment drafted by the department and, and he approved "small" after Southwest to go forward with the project.

But the Sierra Club and Earthjustice, national environmental groups, are in the lawsuit prompting the coal-fire-plant, argue the department should have a chance to write a fine-tuning the old permit. Both groups also want the state to stop the project and to stop the development of a nationally-wrong.

"They are once again trying to take shortcuts," said Amanda Gavelin, an attorney for Earthjustice, which represented the Sierra Club in the lawsuit over the 2010 permit. "It really has been whatever they can do to stop the Sierra Club in the lawsuit."

Department officials declined to discuss the proposed amendment to the Southwest Kansas Power Corp. still reviewing it. The agency also said nothing when Moser will decide.

The "Southwest Kansas" Corp. is a permit-amendment proposed under the state. The department's staff said environmental reviewing does for Southwest in 2010 showed no new coal plant would

See COAL PLANT Page 5

Vol. 129 • No. 17 • 10 Pages
Happy Birthday, Bryan Hubbard
Liberal, Kansas