Show features dogs, children, comedy, music

By RACHEL COLEMAN • Leader & Times Whether or not this week’s unusual cloudy weather clears up, Liberal and area residents can catch a ray of sunshine at the Saturday production of “Annie,” staged by the young cast of the Broadway Academy of Performing. The full musical, with its signature songs “Tomorrow” and “It’s a Hard-Luck Life” begins at 2 p.m. in the Seward County Community College theater.

Campers arrived at SCCC exactly one week before the performance, and are in the thick of preparations for the show. Auditions began just a few hours after the students and their parents stowed sleeping bags and suitcases in the dorm, and selecting a cast was “brutal and cutthroat,” said camp director Alison Bridget Chambers, “because we have this insanely talented group of 20 kids. We’re already ahead of schedule because they want to work so hard. They asked to do a complete second run-through last night ... so we did.”
