Every Sunday morning, Christians everywhere make their way into their church of choice. Many others, for one reason or another, do not attend church on a regular basis.

As part of National Back to Church Sunday, a nationwide initiative across multiple denominations, Liberal's Trinity Faith Church is inviting everyone to attend this Sunday morning.

Pastor Michael Miller said the initiative is simply a way of encouraging people to come back to church.

"With some people, the further north you go, because the winters are so bad that when summer rolls around, they're gone," he said. "Then there's people who for one reason or another just kind of stop going to church altogether or haven't thought about going to church for a while."
