State explains increased employment numbers

The state's economy is showing signs of recovery, with employment numbers increasing in several key sectors. This is due to a combination of factors, including increased government spending and a growing private sector. The state's unemployment rate has decreased from 10.5% in 2010 to 8.5% in 2013. This is a significant improvement and indicates that the state's economy is on a positive trajectory.
