SW Guidance Center director talks about state's new mental health plan

By ROBERT FRANK
 The new mental health plan for North Carolina, which will be implemented in 2014, is a significant step toward providing better care for people with mental health issues, according to the director of the state's mental health services.

Robert Frank, director of the Western Piedmont Guidance Center, spoke at a news conference in Winston-Salem on Tuesday. He said the plan, which was developed by the state's Department of Health and Human Services, is a "game-changer" for the state's mental health system.

The plan calls for a shift from a focus on hospitalization to a focus on community-based care. It also calls for a focus on prevention and early intervention. Frank said the plan is a "holistic" approach to mental health care that will address the needs of people with mental health issues at all stages of their illness.

The plan also calls for a focus on workforce development and training. Frank said the plan is a "transformative" effort that will create new jobs and opportunities for people with mental health issues.

Grain truck swerves to miss camper

Grain truck swerves to miss camper
 A grain truck swerved to miss a camper van on a road in North Carolina. The truck was carrying a large load of grain and was traveling at a high speed. The camper van was in the same lane as the truck and was in the process of passing it. The truck swerved to the right to avoid the camper van, but the camper van was not able to move out of the way in time. The truck struck the camper van, causing it to flip over. The driver of the camper van was injured and was taken to a hospital. The driver of the truck was not injured.
