By KIMBERLY HARRIS
The new mental health plan for North Carolina, which will be implemented in 2014, is a significant step forward for the state, according to the director of the Southwest Guidance Center. The plan, which was developed by the state's Department of Health and Human Services, will focus on providing a more integrated and coordinated system of care for individuals with mental health needs. The plan includes a variety of services, including crisis intervention, outpatient treatment, and residential care. The director, who has been in the position for several years, is optimistic about the future of mental health care in the state. He believes that the new plan will help to reduce the stigma associated with mental illness and ensure that everyone who needs help has access to the care they need.

Anticipating growth

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
A demographer has given the school board data on what lies ahead for the district. The data shows that the district is anticipating significant growth in the coming years, and the school board is preparing to meet this demand. The demographer, who has been hired to provide a comprehensive analysis of the district's demographics, has found that the district is experiencing a steady increase in population. This growth is expected to continue over the next several years, and the school board is working to ensure that the district's schools are able to accommodate this increase. The school board is also looking at ways to improve the quality of education and to provide more resources for students. The demographer's report is a valuable tool for the school board as it makes decisions about the future of the district.

City still has miles to ride through its tree program

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
The city is still in the process of implementing its tree program, and there are still many miles to go. The program is designed to improve the city's appearance and to provide shade for residents. The city has already planted a large number of trees, but there is still a long way to go. The city is working to identify areas that need more trees and to plant them as soon as possible. The tree program is a key part of the city's efforts to create a more livable and sustainable community. The city is committed to providing a high quality of life for its residents, and the tree program is an important part of that commitment. The city is looking for ways to encourage more residents to participate in the program and to plant trees in their own yards.
