SW Guidance Center director talks about state's new mental health plan

By KIMBERLY HARRIS
The new mental health plan for North Carolina is a significant step forward, according to the director of the Southwest Guidance Center. The plan, which was developed by the state's Department of Health and Human Services, aims to improve the lives of people with mental health conditions by providing them with the resources and support they need to thrive.

The plan, which was developed by the state's Department of Health and Human Services, aims to improve the lives of people with mental health conditions by providing them with the resources and support they need to thrive. The plan includes a variety of services, including crisis intervention, case management, and community-based care. The director of the Southwest Guidance Center, Dr. [Name], said that the plan is a significant step forward in the state's efforts to address the needs of people with mental health conditions.
