Local leaders look for answers to day care problem
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Local leaders are looking for answers to a day care problem that has become a major concern for many parents in the area. The problem is that there are not enough day care centers to meet the demand. This is especially true in the city of Kansas City, where the population is growing rapidly. Local leaders are looking for ways to increase the number of day care centers and to improve the quality of the care that is available. They are also looking for ways to make day care more affordable for parents. This is a complex problem that will require a coordinated effort from all stakeholders.
