Routine blood test saved baby's life

MCADD a silent killer for many

A 14-year-old boy, who looks like the average kid, has a secret. He has a rare genetic disorder called maple syrup urine disease (MSUD). The disease is a metabolic disorder that affects the body's ability to break down certain amino acids. If left untreated, it can lead to severe brain damage and even death. The boy's parents, Colleen and Morgan, knew that only blood tests could detect the disease. They were lucky to catch it early, and the boy is now thriving.
