Routine blood test saved baby's life

MCADD a silent killer for many

A 14-month-old baby, who looked healthy and happy, died last week. The parents, Colleen and Morgan, had a routine blood test done on their baby, but only knew after his death he was a typical case of MCADD.

Colleen and Morgan had a routine blood test done on their baby, but only knew after his death he was a typical case of MCADD. The parents were told that their baby had a rare genetic condition called MCADD (medium-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency). The condition is a rare genetic condition that affects the body's ability to break down fats for energy. It is a silent killer for many children.
