City bids farewell to public works director Joe Sealey

By MICHAEL COLEMAN
The Liberal City Council has bid farewell to Joe Sealey, the city's public works director, after a career of 12 years. Sealey, 52, was hired in 2001 and served as the city's public works director until his resignation in May 2013. During his tenure, Sealey oversaw the city's public works department, which is responsible for maintaining the city's infrastructure, including streets, bridges, and public buildings. Sealey was a dedicated professional and a valued member of the Liberal community. The city council expressed their appreciation for his service and wished him well in his future endeavors.

New generation of trap shooters step up and

By MICHAEL COLEMAN
A new generation of trap shooters is stepping up at the 4-H Shooting Sports Club. The club, which has been active for many years, is providing a safe and supervised environment for youth to learn the sport of trap shooting. The club's members are encouraged to participate in various shooting activities, including trap shooting, and to develop their skills and knowledge. The club's activities are designed to promote safety, sportsmanship, and a healthy lifestyle. The club's members are proud to represent their community and to participate in this exciting sport.
