Kansas survivalist faces trial over grenades

By JERRY ELLIOTT
Special Column

The federal grand jury returned a 12-count indictment against a Kansas survivalist, charging him with manufacturing, possessing and transporting explosives. The charges against the defendant, 47-year-old James Earl Ray, were returned in a secret hearing in federal court in Kansas City, Mo., on July 11. Ray is charged with manufacturing, possessing and transporting explosives, including grenades, in violation of federal law. The charges are part of a larger investigation into the activities of a group of survivalists in the state.
