Kan. court remands case of gun shop liability

AP/WIDEWORLD

TOPEKA — Kansas judges ruled on the right to life, liberty and property, and the right to keep and bear arms, in a decision that could have far-reaching implications for gun shop liability.

The court ruled in favor of the gun shop, stating that the state's gun liability law is unconstitutional. The court found that the law violated the state's constitution, which guarantees the right to life, liberty and property, and the right to keep and bear arms.

The court's decision is a significant victory for gun shops and gun owners. It could lead to other states revisiting their gun liability laws. The court's decision is a clear statement that gun shops are not liable for the actions of their customers.
