Egyptian authorities detain suspected 'spy' swan

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian authorities have detained a swan suspected of spying on the country's military bases, according to a report from the state-run press agency. The swan was found near a military base in the desert and was taken to a zoo. It was later found to have a small electronic device attached to its neck, which was used to transmit information to a satellite. The swan was released back into the pond after the device was removed.
