'English only' applies to employees at health dept.
In CLARK COUNTY
Clark County Health Department employees are being required to speak only English on the job, a policy that has caused some controversy. The health department says the policy is necessary to ensure clear communication with patients and staff. However, some employees feel that the policy is discriminatory and that they should be allowed to speak their native language.

Reno Co. seeks to try teen as adult in fire case
The Reno County Board of Supervisors is considering whether to try a 17-year-old boy as an adult in connection with a fire that destroyed a home in the county. The fire occurred in July and caused significant damage to the property. The boy is currently being held in custody and is facing charges of arson.
