Com harvest above expectations due to weather
1,326,000 bushels of corn — that's a record — were harvested in Kansas this year, according to the Kansas Department of Agriculture. The record was set because of a combination of factors, including a record early start to the harvest season and a record high yield per acre. The record was also due to a combination of factors, including a record early start to the harvest season and a record high yield per acre. Report: US combine sales plunge in September
US combine sales plunged in September, according to a report from the International Harvester Co. The report shows that sales were down 15% from the same month last year. The report also shows that sales were down 10% from the same quarter last year. The report is a reflection of the weak economy and the slow recovery in the construction industry.
