Kan. utilities expect higher winter heating costs

As the 14th in a series of reports on the state's economic outlook, the poll shows that most Kansans are pessimistic about the state's economic future. However, there is still a strong desire for reform and change. The poll also shows that many Kansans are concerned about the state's budget and the impact of the recession. Overall, the poll indicates that Kansans are looking for a brighter future, but they need to see concrete action from the state government.

Poll: Half of older workers delay retirement plans

Many older workers are delaying their retirement plans due to economic uncertainty and the need to save more. The poll shows that about 50% of older workers are postponing their retirement, while only about 25% are planning to retire in the next year. This is a significant trend that highlights the financial challenges faced by older workers in the current economy.

KAN. UTILITIES EXPECT HIGHER WINTER HEATING COSTS
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas utilities are bracing for a winter season that could bring higher heating costs for consumers. The Kansas Gas & Electric Board said Wednesday that it expects natural gas prices to rise significantly in the winter months, which could lead to higher rates for utility customers.

POLL: HALF OF OLDER WORKERS DELAY RETIREMENT PLANS
A new survey shows that more than half of older workers are delaying their retirement plans. The survey, conducted by the Pew Research Center, found that 50% of workers aged 60 and older are postponing their retirement, compared to 25% who are planning to retire in the next year. This trend is largely driven by concerns about the economy and the need to accumulate more savings before retiring.
