Kansas officials urge motorists to watch for deer
Kansas officials are urging motorists to watch for deer on the roads during the fall season. Deer are a major cause of traffic accidents in the state, and motorists should be especially cautious during the fall months when deer are more likely to be on the roads. Officials recommend that motorists slow down and stay alert for deer, especially in rural areas. If a deer is spotted on the road, motorists should stop and call the Kansas Department of Transportation for assistance.
