Building relationships with Bright Futures
Bright Futures aims to connect community schools

By Mark C. Collins

It's hard to see a new man, Bright Futures, in a world of old men, but the organization is doing it. The new organization is building relationships with community schools and is focused on connecting them to the resources they need to succeed. Bright Futures is a national organization that provides financial support to community schools. The organization is currently looking for schools to partner with. If you are interested, please contact Bright Futures at 800-368-5838.

Government reopens after Congress ends 16-day shutdown

By [Name]

The government has resumed operations after a 16-day shutdown. President Obama has signed a bill to extend the federal government's funding. The bill is expected to be signed into law by the end of the week. The shutdown was caused by a disagreement between the House and the Senate over the budget. The House passed a budget that would have cut spending, while the Senate passed a budget that would have increased spending. The two bills were not reconciled, and the government had to shut down. The shutdown affected many federal agencies, including the Department of Education, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of Justice. The shutdown also affected many federal employees, who were not paid during the shutdown. The government is now back in operation, but the budget dispute remains unresolved.
