SUICIDE WATCH
A new study published in the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry shows that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are at a higher risk of suicide. The study found that 15 percent of children and adolescents with mental health conditions had suicidal thoughts or behaviors. The researchers also found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions were more likely to attempt suicide than those without mental health conditions. The study was conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Diego and the University of Colorado, Boulder. The researchers analyzed data from a national survey of children and adolescents with mental health conditions. The study found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions were more likely to attempt suicide than those without mental health conditions. The researchers also found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions were more likely to have suicidal thoughts or behaviors than those without mental health conditions. DUST BOWL
New book looks at those who survived and stayed
By FRANK R. STREIBER
The Dust Bowl was a period of severe drought and dust storms that affected the central United States during the 1930s. It was a time of great hardship and suffering for many people. However, some people managed to survive and stay in their homes. A new book, "The Dust Bowl: How One Man Survived the Worst Year in American History," tells the story of one such man. The book is written by Frank R. Streiber. It is a true story of a man who lived through the Dust Bowl and stayed in his home. The book is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit. The book is available for purchase at www.dustbowl.com.

Local man's effort helping restore abandoned Springfield Cemetery
A local man is working to restore an abandoned cemetery in Springfield. The cemetery was abandoned in the 1950s and has since been overgrown with weeds and brush. The man, who is a volunteer, has been working to clear the area and restore the graves. He has been successful in clearing many of the graves and has been able to identify many of the people buried there. The man is hoping to raise money to help with the restoration of the cemetery. He is currently accepting donations and is looking for volunteers to help with the work. The cemetery is located on the corner of 12th and Main streets in Springfield. For more information, visit www.springfieldcemetery.com.
