SUICIDE WATCH
A new study published in the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry shows that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are at a higher risk of suicide. The study found that 15 percent of children and adolescents with mental health conditions had suicidal thoughts in the past year. The study also found that 10 percent of children and adolescents with mental health conditions had attempted suicide in the past year. The study was conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Diego and the University of Colorado, Boulder. The researchers found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are at a higher risk of suicide because they are more likely to have suicidal thoughts and to attempt suicide. The researchers also found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are more likely to be hospitalized for suicidal thoughts and to die by suicide. The researchers recommend that children and adolescents with mental health conditions should be monitored closely for suicidal thoughts and should be treated with medication and therapy. The researchers also recommend that parents and caregivers should be educated about the signs and symptoms of suicidal thoughts and should be encouraged to seek help for their children and adolescents if they are concerned about their mental health.

DUST BOWL
New book looks at those who survived and stayed
By FRANK R. STREIBER
The Dust Bowl was a period of severe drought and dust storms that affected the central United States from 1930 to 1936. The Dust Bowl was caused by a combination of factors, including drought, overfarming, and the lack of windbreaks. The Dust Bowl had a devastating impact on the lives of millions of people. Many people lost their homes and their livelihoods. The Dust Bowl also had a significant impact on the environment. The Dust Bowl is a reminder of the importance of sustainable agriculture and the need to protect our environment.
