

More boy, Trigger? No thanks. Boy, I'm stuffed!
College names People's Choice Awards Lawyers: Pa. high paper to resume Redskins ban

Manhunt intensifies for Mississippi bank robber suspected in cop's death

STILL MISSING! REWARDS $1,000 to $250,000 for info on

MONDAY DECEMBER 30, 2013
LEADER & TIMES
 Your daily news & news for 127 years

LOOKING FOR A PET?

Man thought to be victim of serial killer found alive

Robert Ramirez was last heard from in 1975, when he told his mother he was heading from New York to California.

His mother, Mrs. Rosa Ramirez, said she was shocked to learn that her son was still alive. She said she had not heard from him since 1975, when he told her he was heading from New York to California.

Ramirez was last seen in 1975, when he told his mother he was heading from New York to California. She said she had not heard from him since then.

The Ramirez family had the assistance of the Green House of the World Christmas Lighting Center. The red, blue, green, yellow & white lights of the house were lit up and the Green House staff was in charge of the lighting of the center. (Carter photo)

DOJ enters 'knockout game' fray with hate crime charge

The Justice Department has filed a hate crime charge against a man accused of killing a gay man in a bar in Washington, D.C. The man, 26, is accused of killing the victim with a knife.

The man, 26, is accused of killing the victim with a knife. The victim was a gay man who was killed in a bar in Washington, D.C. The man is accused of killing the victim with a knife.

Robert Ramirez was last heard from in 1975, when he told his mother he was heading from New York to California.