Justice delays health law's birth control mandate

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has twice delayed the implementation of the controversial federal health care law's birth control mandate, a move critics say will allow states to continue to block the rule.

The court's decision on Monday, the second in a row, means the mandate will not take effect until at least the end of the year. The court has previously ruled that the mandate is constitutional, but has delayed its final decision on whether the federal government can force states to pay for the rule.

The mandate requires employers with more than 50 employees to provide health insurance that covers birth control. The rule is part of the Affordable Care Act, which was signed into law in 2010.

The court's decision on Monday was a 5-4 vote. The majority opinion, written by Justice Alito, says that the federal government's argument that the mandate is a tax is not persuasive. The court will now hear oral arguments on the issue in March.

The dissenting opinion, written by Justice Ginsburg, says that the mandate is a tax and that the federal government can enforce it. She says that the court's previous decision in National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius (2012) is still binding.

The court's decision is expected to have a significant impact on the health care industry. Many employers are already providing birth control coverage, but some are not. The mandate could force them to do so.

The court's decision is also expected to have a significant impact on the political process. Many people are already calling for the repeal of the mandate. The court's decision could give them more momentum.

Governor's plan aligns with Liberal's needs

CHICAGO — Governor Bruce Rauner's plan to create a new state agency to oversee the state's health care programs is seen as a win for liberal Democrats. The plan would create a new agency called the Illinois Health Care Commission. The agency would be responsible for overseeing the state's health care programs, including Medicaid and the state's health insurance exchange. The plan would also give the agency the authority to regulate health care providers. The plan is seen as a win for liberal Democrats because it would give them more control over the state's health care programs.

State attorneys general claim ObamaCare changes are illegal

WASHINGTON — A coalition of 26 state attorneys general has filed a lawsuit with the U.S. Supreme Court, claiming that changes to the Affordable Care Act (ACA) are unconstitutional. The lawsuit was filed on Monday. The coalition includes attorneys general from 26 states, including Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and West Virginia. The lawsuit claims that the ACA's individual mandate, which requires people to buy health insurance, is unconstitutional. It also claims that the ACA's community rating provisions, which require insurers to pool risks, are unconstitutional. The lawsuit is expected to be heard by the Supreme Court in the fall of 2013.

ObamaCare brings new taxes, fees for 2014

WASHINGTON — The Affordable Care Act (ACA) will bring new taxes and fees for 2014. The new taxes and fees are part of the ACA's financing package. The new taxes and fees are: a 3.8 percent excise tax on medical services, a 3.8 percent excise tax on high-net-worth individuals, a 1.9 percent excise tax on the sale of health insurance, and a 0.9 percent excise tax on the sale of health insurance. The new taxes and fees are expected to raise $1.2 trillion over the next 10 years. The new taxes and fees are expected to have a significant impact on the health care industry. Many people are already calling for the repeal of the ACA. The new taxes and fees could give them more momentum.
