National Beef to shut California plant, cites tight cattle supply

Additional processing could be seen locally

National Beef
National Beef Packing Co. says its California plant will be shut down because of a tight cattle supply. The company says it will continue to process beef in its other plants, but it may have to increase processing in its Kansas City plant to meet local demand.

Obama running out of reasons to reject Keystone XL
The Obama administration is running out of reasons to reject the Keystone XL pipeline, according to a report from the Heritage Foundation. The report says that the administration has used up its list of objections and is now looking for new ones to justify its decision.
