National Beef to shut California plant, cites tight cattle supply

Additional processing could be seen locally

National Beef
National Beef Packing Co. says it will shut its California plant because of a tight cattle supply. The company says it will move production to its Texas plant, which has a larger supply of cattle. The move is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The company also says it will be looking for additional processing capacity in the local market.

Obama running out of reasons to reject Keystone XL

Obama is running out of reasons to reject the Keystone XL pipeline. The administration has cited concerns about the environment and the impact on the economy. However, critics argue that the pipeline is a necessary part of the energy infrastructure and that the concerns are unfounded. The administration is expected to make a final decision on the pipeline in the coming months.
