National Beef to shut California plant, cites tight cattle supply

Additional processing could be seen locally

National Beef
National Beef Packing Co. says its plant in California will be shut down because of a tight cattle supply. The company says it will continue to process beef in California but will move its main processing operations to Texas. Obama running out of reasons to reject Keystone XL

Obama is running out of reasons to reject the Keystone XL pipeline. The president has already rejected the pipeline twice, but he is still looking for a way to stop it. The pipeline is a major project that will transport oil from the Canadian province of Alberta to the Gulf of Mexico.
