Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

NEW YORK — Woody Allen's allies on Monday cast doubt on the sexual abuse claims of a woman who says she was sexually abused by the filmmaker in the 1970s.

The woman, who is now 40, says she was sexually abused by Allen when she was 13 years old. She says she was sexually abused by Allen for several years, from 1972 to 1977.

Allen's allies, including his lawyer and several friends, say the woman's claims are unfounded. They say she is a liar and that she is trying to ruin Allen's reputation.

Allen's lawyer, Robert M. Weisbach, says the woman's claims are "completely untrue." He says she is a "liar" and that she is "trying to ruin Woody's reputation."

Allen's friends, including his ex-wife Mia Farrow, also say the woman's claims are unfounded. They say she is a "liar" and that she is "trying to ruin Woody's reputation."

The woman's claims have caused a major scandal for Allen. He has been accused of sexual abuse by several women in the past. He has also been accused of child molestation.

Allen has always denied the charges. He says he is a "good man" and that he is "innocent of all charges."
