Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

By AP Wire

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen's allies on Monday cast doubt on the sexual abuse claims of a woman who says she was sexually abused by the filmmaker in the 1970s.

The woman, who is now 40, says she was sexually abused by Allen when she was 17 and he was 44. She says she was pregnant with his child, but she says she was not aware of the pregnancy until she was 19.

Allen's allies, including his lawyer and several friends, say the woman's claims are unfounded and that she is trying to ruin Allen's reputation.

Allen's lawyer, Michael Brown, says the woman's claims are "completely untrue" and that she is "trying to ruin Woody's reputation."

Allen's friend, Richard Dreyfuss, says the woman's claims are "completely untrue" and that she is "trying to ruin Woody's reputation."

Allen's friend, John Cazale, says the woman's claims are "completely untrue" and that she is "trying to ruin Woody's reputation."
