Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen's allies on Monday cast doubt on the sexual abuse claims of a woman who says she was sexually abused by the filmmaker in the 1970s.

The woman, who is now 40, says she was sexually abused by Allen when she was 17 and he was 44. She says she was pregnant with his child, but she says she was not aware of the pregnancy until she was 19.

Allen's lawyer, Robert M. Weisbach, says the woman's claims are "completely untrue" and that she is "a liar." He says she is trying to "defame" Allen and "ruin his reputation."

Allen's lawyer also says that the woman's claims are "inconsistent" with the fact that she was pregnant with Allen's child in 1977, when she was 17 and he was 44. He says that she was not pregnant with his child until she was 19, which is "inconsistent" with the fact that she was pregnant with his child in 1977.

Nothing controversial in Super Bowl ads

Nothing controversial in Super Bowl ads

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Super Bowl ads are so controversial that they are banned from the network, but a new ad for a dog food brand is being shown during the game.

The ad features a dog and a person's hand, and it is being shown during the game. The ad is for a dog food brand called "Love From The Heart of the Dog."
