Congressional analysts say health care law means fewer on job

WASHINGTON — Congressional analysts say the health care law will mean fewer jobs in the private sector, but more in the public sector.

The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) released a report on Wednesday that says the law will create 1.6 million new jobs in the public sector, but 2.1 million in the private sector.

The report says that the law will create 1.6 million new jobs in the public sector, but 2.1 million in the private sector. The report also says that the law will create 1.6 million new jobs in the public sector, but 2.1 million in the private sector.
