Kansans targeted by court scams

Opportunity cost
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A federal judge has issued a nationwide injunction against a type of scam that has targeted Kansans and other Americans. The scam involves sending victims a letter that says they have won a prize, but to receive it, they must first pay a fee. The judge said the scam is a form of identity theft and is illegal under federal law. The judge also ordered the defendant to pay damages to the victims.

Kan. universities could join regional online group

STPAUL, Mo. — An idea for the Kansas State System, the University of Kansas, and the University of Missouri to join a regional online group is gaining momentum. The group would allow students to take courses at other universities in the region, which could save money and provide more flexibility. The idea is still in the early stages, but it has the support of many students and faculty members.

Opponents surge against wind energy project

ALSO-KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Opponents of a wind energy project in the state have surged in their efforts to stop the project. The project, which would involve building several large wind turbines, has been met with significant resistance from local residents and environmental groups. They argue that the project would harm the local environment and property values. The project is currently on hold, and the developers are looking for ways to address the concerns.

House panel to vote on gun rights measure

STPAUL, Mo. — A House panel is expected to vote on a gun rights measure. The measure would allow gun owners to carry their firearms in public places, even if they are not licensed. The measure has been controversial, with supporters arguing for the right to bear arms and opponents arguing for public safety. The vote is expected to take place in the coming weeks.
