IRS warns of heavy call volume, offers tips for faster answers

WASHINGTON — The IRS issued a warning Monday that it expects to receive a record number of calls from taxpayers seeking information about the new tax rules that take effect on Jan. 1. The IRS says it expects to receive about 1.5 billion calls in the first three months of the year, up from about 1 billion in 2013. The IRS says it will be providing additional support to taxpayers, including offering more phone lines and online resources. The IRS also says it will be providing more information about the new rules, including offering more guidance and examples.
