"This event has been very successful in the past," said Linda Smith, the school's director of financial aid. "It gives students the chance to ask questions and get personalized advice from college representatives." The event runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday.
"We have over 50 college representatives here," Smith said. "Students can get information on everything from in-state public universities to out-of-state private colleges." The event is free and open to all students and families.
