Ca. judge asked to stop new Vidalia onion rule

ROBERT BURKEY, JR., of the Central and Eastern portions of California's Central Valley, has asked a federal judge to stop the implementation of a new rule that would require Vidalia onions to be grown in California. The rule, which was adopted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, would require that all Vidalia onions sold in the United States be grown in California. Burkey, who is a farmer and a member of the Vidalia Onion Growers Association, argues that the rule is unfair to growers in other states and would harm the economy.
