BY KIMBERLY CHAMBERS
Linda Plett is 101 years old, and she is still going strong. She has lived through the Great Depression, World War II, and the Vietnam War. She has seen the rise and fall of many presidents and has witnessed the birth of the nation's first woman president. She has lived through the most difficult times in our nation's history, and she has emerged as a woman of strength and resilience.

Linda Plett was born in 1913 in the small town of Garden City, Kansas. She grew up in a family of farmers and was the oldest of five children. She attended the local school and graduated in 1931. She then worked for a few years before getting married to a man who was also a farmer. They had three children and lived a simple, hardworking life.

When World War II broke out, Linda's husband was drafted into the military. She took over the farm and supported the family on her own. She worked long hours and did whatever it took to keep the family going. She was a woman of grit and determination, and she never gave up.

After the war, Linda's husband returned home, but the family's financial situation was still difficult. Linda continued to work hard and eventually managed to get the family back on its feet. She was a woman of faith and often turned to her religion for comfort and strength.

Linda Plett is a woman of many accomplishments. She has lived through some of the most difficult times in our nation's history, and she has emerged as a woman of strength and resilience. She is a true American hero, and her story is one that we should all be proud to know.

She is still active and enjoys spending time with her family and friends. She is a member of the Garden City Senior Center and is active in many community organizations. She is a woman of many talents and has a wealth of knowledge and experience to share.
