Tornado shelters face dilemma with pet lovers

LEADERSHIP
LAWRENCE
A dog named 'Cody' is seen with his owner, a woman, as they walk through a tornado shelter. The dog is sitting on the floor, and the woman is leaning over to pet it. The shelter is a large, open area with a concrete floor and walls. The woman is wearing a dark jacket and a hat. The dog is a small, light-colored breed. The woman is looking at the camera and smiling. The dog is looking at the camera and barking.

...and calling 911. A woman said she was in a shelter with her dog, and she was told to leave the dog outside. She said she was told that the dog would be safe outside, but she was not sure. She said she was told that the dog would be safe outside, but she was not sure. She said she was told that the dog would be safe outside, but she was not sure.

2 men drop their federal lawsuit over Kansas voter ID law

LAWRENCE
Two men have dropped their federal lawsuit challenging the state's voter ID law. The lawsuit was filed in federal court in Lawrence, Kan., in January 2013. The men, who are both attorneys, had argued that the law violated the U.S. Constitution. However, they have now agreed to a settlement with the state. The settlement allows the men to continue to practice law in Kansas without the need for a voter ID. The state has agreed to pay the men's legal fees. The settlement is expected to be finalized in the next few weeks.
