Partnership between community colleges, military leader makes the difference for this first-generation student

BY KACELI QUINN

When Carl found himself in a bind, he turned to the community college he had just graduated from. He was looking for a way to continue his education and had heard that the military was offering a program to help first-generation students. He contacted the local military leader, and they worked together to get Carl into the program. Carl is now a member of the military and is on his way to a better future.

Focus groups OK schematic designs on 3 new schools in expansion plans

BY KACELI QUINN

The school district has completed the process of selecting a contractor for the construction of three new schools. The focus groups have provided valuable input on the schematic designs, and the district is confident that the new schools will be a great addition to the community.
