Partnership between community colleges, industry leader makes the difference for this first-generation student

By KACELI QUINN

When Greg Smith looks to work at his father's company, he has a goal in mind: to be the first in his family to graduate from college. He's not alone. Many students at the University of Northern Iowa are working to overcome the challenges of being the first in their families to attend college.

Smith, a first-generation student, is currently a student at the University of Northern Iowa. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society and is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society. He is also a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society.

Smith's success is a result of a partnership between the University of Northern Iowa and a local industry leader. This partnership has provided Smith with the resources and support he needs to succeed in his studies.

Smith's story is a testament to the power of a positive process. It shows that with the right support and resources, anyone can overcome the challenges of being a first-generation student.

Focus groups OK schematic designs on 3 new schools in expansion plans

By KACELI QUINN

The school district's expansion plans for the next 10 years are being shaped by a series of focus groups. The district is currently in the process of reviewing schematic designs for three new schools. The focus groups have provided valuable feedback on the designs and helped to identify areas for improvement.

The focus groups have been held in various locations throughout the district. They have included parents, teachers, and community members. The feedback has been used to refine the designs and ensure that they meet the needs of the community.

The district is committed to providing high-quality education for all students. The new schools will be a key part of this commitment. The focus groups have helped to ensure that the designs are of the highest quality and that they will meet the needs of the community.
