

Each Space Shuttle flight returns with photographs taken of the Earth's surface. These photographs provide a unique view of the changing surface of the Earth, including landforms, weather patterns and other surface disturbances. This exhibit includes a collection of 24 framed photographs with captions providing various views of the ever changing surface of the Earth.

Now on display through the summer of 2012 at the Mid-America Air Museum.